

Local History Collection | 1852-2011 (bulk 1940-2011)

Prior to becoming incorporated as a city on November 8, 1921, Royal Oak was first established as a township on January 23, 1819, and then a village on March 18, 1891. The city's first mayor was George A. Dondero, who later went on to become a Michigan representative to the U.S. House.

Though Royal Oak's first "library" appeared in 1852 as a reading room in the Township doctor's home, it was not until almost the mid-twentieth century before the city's librarians started collecting information about the city and documenting its history. The local history collection contains atlases, tax assessment rolls, and other city records and documents, as well as an extensive array of newspaper clippings that primarily cover the past seventy years. Other print materials include books about the city, its residents, and reference materials such as Polk's and Bresser's. The collection even contains yearbooks for local high schools dating back to 1919, and two small boxes of black and white photographs of various people and landmarks in Royal Oak. In addition to these resources, microfilm reels of the Daily Tribune and Oakland County census records and mortality schedules are available as well as a local history image gallery on our website (www.ropl.org) that features images of Royal Oak's World War II service men and women.

The bulk of the materials in the local history collection focus on Royal Oak. There is a separate filing cabinet that contains news clippings related only to Oakland County history.

Important items and subjects covered in this collection are:

- Annual reports
- Atlases of both southern and northern Oakland County, 1860-1963 (not all years available)
- Blueprints and development plans for I-696
- Blueprints and development plans for downtown Royal Oak in the 1990s
